

HostRocket Co-Founder Named to Tech Valley Hot 10 List

Brendan Brader, HostRocket Co-Founder and CEO, has been named to the 2005 Tech Valley Hot 10 List, which names the 10 most influential technology leaders in New York's Tech Valley.

Clifton Park, NY (PRWEB) December 30, 2005 -- The results are in...and the 'Tech Valley's Hot 10' list for 2005 has been compiled. The list, which is compiled annually by the Albany-Colonie Chamber of Commerce with assistance from local media, names the technology executives and leaders in New York's Tech Valley which are considered to be the most influential for the year.

At 24, Brendan Brader, HostRocket (<http://www.hostrocket.com>) Co-Founder and CEO, is the youngest of the influential leaders highlighted in the prestigious list this year. In 1999, Brader co-founded HostRocket just after graduating from high school. Since that time, the company has grown to become one of the top web hosting providers in the industry and has hosted more than 50,000 websites from its high-end facility in the Tech Valley. With its upcoming launch of new service Rocket Freedom, the company continues to set the standard for web hosting providers everywhere with constant innovation.

Earlier this year HostRocket launched sister company ViaTalk LLC, which provides VoIP (Voice Over IP) telephone service. The service allows customers to use standard telephones with their broadband Internet connection to make and receive telephone calls. Since the calls are transmitted using the Internet, consumers can get service packages that include unlimited calling for under 16 dollars monthly.

Both companies are lead on a daily basis by Brader with assistance from Timothy Dick who serves as Vice President of Operations and John Reyes who serves as Chief Technical Officer. When his selection for the Hot 10 list was announced, Brader stated "I'm thrilled that we are able to have such a profound impact on the Tech Valley, the local economy, and the lives of our customers," with a look of satisfaction. His vision and commitment to excellence continue to further propel the unprecedented growth and success of the companies.
